HUNGRY FOR OFFICES.

Thousands of Patriots Willing to Work for Uncle Sam.

Why It Does Not Pay to Hold Diplomatic Appointments—Does it Treat its Foreign Representatives Very Shabbily.

(Special Washington Letter.)

There is undoubtedly a growing ambition in this country for appointments to government offices. The civil service commission files are full of applications, and there are upwards of twenty persons who pass rigid examinations for these places for every official position within the classified list. In spite of the law upon the subject the various candidates file recommendations from the politicians who are great men in their own countries, but who are unknown in Washington and of no consequence in the eyes of the department functionaries who have the bestowal of favors.

The positions which are filled by the president are comparatively few. His purposes from all other important powers, and necessarily courtesies had to be exchanged.

The officers of the American ships were entertained on board those of each foreign government, and balls and dinner parties had to be given in return. This must cost great sums, all of which had to be defrayed out of the private purses of the United States officers, some of whom were compelled to do this.

At this point, to mortgage their energy salaries for a year or two in advance to meet these international obligations. For the expenses of this sort incurred by the officers their home government paid as a matter of course. It seemed, however, to be considered a part of the United States officers' duty to set up the same kind of refreshments on the semi-public occasions in question. So it is always. These foreigners, too, are used to the very best and most expensive wines and liquors, and the officers of the American navy cannot decently return their hospitality with inferior entertainment. It is unfortunate that international customs are so expensive; but we must take facts as we find them. We should have national pride in maintaining our part of country without taxing our public servants. If we can't dress and live as other nations do, we should fall to the rear and make no pretensions.

John C. New, of Indiana, the strong and warm political friend of President Harrison, declined the position of envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary to Great Britain, and accepted the secondary position of consul general, because the more honorable position would have paid but $12,000 per annum, and the expenses amount to more than $25,000 a year. He preferred to be made consul general to England, because there was money in the latter office, whereas to be minister would have ruined him. For, pray, remember, the consul generalship at London is worth something like $40,000 a year, without any of the expensive social obligations which devolve upon a minister at court. Mr. New would have preferred the greater office, but he could not afford to take it. Robert T. Lincoln was made minister to Great Britain, and he suffered financially. Mr. New saved nearly $100,000 during his four years as consul general.

While the ambassador to Great Britain is obliged to live on a comparatively small salary, and pay for the expenses of public entertainments out of his own pocket, the British ambassador to this country has a salary of $60,000 per annum, a handsome residence which belongs to his government, and a liberal allowance for the expenses of state entertainments. Some of our people, imbued with Jeffersonian simplicity, will be inclined to say that these expensive entertainments might be dispensed with. But you might as well say that in our cities, towns and villages we should do away with our entertainments of our friends. If John Jones and his wife want to invite John Smith and his wife to dine with them, or give a party for their children, they have a right to do so, and will continue to do so forever.

Well, when the French minister and the British minister, and the ministers of other countries, invite our diplomatic representatives to state dinners, those invitations must be accepted; and our ministers and ambassadors must give similar entertainments in return. It is the custom of the civilized world, and we must comply with those customs or else give up diplomatic relations with other nations, which is impossible.

At these great entertainments the ladies belonging to the families of our foreign ministers must dress as the wives and daughters of other ministers dress. No lady can appear on such an occasion in any gown costing less than $500 without appearing to be a cheap person from a cheap nation. On great occasions the ladies must be dressed in attire entirely new, and which has never been worn before.

When James Buchanan was minister to Great Britain he was requested to appear at the opening of parliament in his own real dress. Since that time this country has become the richest in the world, and plutocrats bursting with dollars are eager in solidifying their position with the government in foreign parts. It is said now that no man who is not a millionaire can afford to accept a mission from this country, so enormous is the expense of such an appointment. For, say what you will, an ambassador to England or France feels the same humiliation that afflicted John Adams when he found himself unable to keep his end up in behalf of the United States with diplomats from other nations. In a small way the case is very well illustrated by the situation of an American naval officer of rank. Such a man, in the service of Great Britain when exposed to a necessity for entertaining, is supplied by his government with a fund of money, or is authorized to send in bills to the admiralty. There are circumstances under which American naval officers are put to really severe expense of this sort. For instance, at the New Orleans exposition an admiral was sent in command of a small fleet to do honors on the water for the United States. There were vessels present for complimentary

How at Last
By Bernard Bagby

"George Harland" he shrieked. "My God, what have I done!"

He helps Grey bear the lifeless burden to the house, he hears little Willie's piteous cry, as they lay it on the bed, he lingers for one moment at the door and tries to utter a few words of sympathy, which his parched lips refuse to form, he looks in mute appeal to Alice, he sees her pointing to the door, and hears her scornful "Go!" with a groan, as he sinks into the deserted street, straight on his way to give himself up at the nearest police station.

For days George Harland's spirit hovered between life and death—and all the time the wolf was at the door, and the poor, stricken woman knew where to turn for help, too proud even to let her lodger know they were lacking the bare necessities of life.

"Allie," said the sorrowful wife one day, when George was convalescing, "will you take care of Willie? I am going down town."

"Yes; but where are you going, Nell?"

"To the pawnbroker's," was the sad reply.

"Oh, Nell!"

Those who live in low prosperous countries could hardly understand the tone of anguish in the girl's tones, where none is so poor he would not blush to own he had fled to that last refuge of the destitute.

What have I done?

"And I must bear my share of the sacrifice. Oh, do let me, Nell, and Alice run to fetch the pretty trinkets and best dress it had cost her so much pinching to earn."

In rapid succession all other superfluities followed—then the necessities, the sheets and blankets, George's best clothes, and one sorrowful day saw the young, sobbing wife draw her wedding ring from her finger and pass down the street to the house with the three golden balls.

How vain had been George Harland's boast of his superb strength, mechanical skill, temperate habits, and profitable employment. He, who had defied sickness and laughed at misfortune, now lay a physical wreck in a gaunt house blighted by the curse of a walking delegate.

CHAPTER XII.
WORK OF FLAME.

A mass meeting.

No hall could hold the vast concourse of excited men and women gathered to discuss the labor trouble, which threatened to spread like fire into the streets, and even to give color to the dread of an outbreak of communism, which has always been a bugbear to Chicago.

Loud of voice and strong of lung, Demagogue Schlessinger roared his denunciations from the platform with the rude brute eloquence of the even chords of sympathy in Frank Grey's heart, much as he despised the man.

It was a bitter arraignment of the wealthy classes, showing under a glaring light of savage criticism the jobberies and corruptions of public offices, the cruel tyranny of monopolies, the hard fetters laid on the poor, and work for his daily bread. Vulgar and ill-bred as the fellow was he was a born orator, and when he rose to address in his speech mere listened with breathless interest.

But a strange thing was to happen. The speaker was in the midst of his most lurid flight of his imagination, and paused with folded arms to let the weight of his words sink into the hearts of his hearers.

Every eye was fixed on him. Every beam was thrilled with emotion.

Suddenly—no one could say exactly how or whence she came, a young woman sprang to his side, pale as marble and with flashing eyes, hatless and with hair streaming in the wind.

She stood for a moment facing the astonished multitude, uttering a voice laden with passion, but clear and musical as a bell, she cried with unisonous plangency:

"Men and women hear me, for I will speak. I come to you from a home made desolate by your folly, from the bedside of a half-murdered husband, with the cries of my children for bread ringing in my saddened ears. O, listen to me! For the sake of your wives and little ones you must and shall hear me!"

The silence was intense.

"Order," yelled Alice, recovering his self-possession. "Throw her out! Off with the crazy fool!"

"No," roared the sickle-crowned "Lawyer speak."

That this ill-clad young woman inspired drank in the music of her voice, as every listener to the terrible tale of their sufferings, and when in glowing tones she pictured her happy days before the strike, and drew the contrast of her present bright life with the life of the women who sympathized and even men's eyes filled with tears.

Not did they grow restive when she reproached them for sacrificing to their loved ones the comfort of those they should have loved dearer than their lives—the folly, the madness of their actions, which had led them to the very verge of martyrdom.

"And for what," she cried, "for what have you steeped your souls in crime and shadowed your homes in poverty?"

For a sentiment—for a weak, sickly sense of offended dignity, which a school-boy would blush to point out.

Then, with infinite tenderness, she drew a picture of her sister's sorrows, and the tragic story of Joe Henderson's love and ruin. And at last, in one grand burst of passionate eloquence, she drew a picture of her own life.

She finished—cast one look full of mute pathos at the people—and with mad bowed low retreated from the platform.

For a moment there was silence; then the pent-up feelings of those thrilling forty minutes burst forth in one tremendous roar of applause.

Cheer upon cheer greeted the brave girl, as she stepped through the crowd; men elung round her and kissed her hand; men, women, children, men shook her by the hand and poured lavish praises in her ears.

Well might those self-elected tribunes of the people, Schlessinger and Atkins, look glum, for the backbone of the strike was broken and the next day the busy hum of industry made music in the erst deserted shipyards of Chicago.

And one man went back to his lodging dismayed at the events—feeling very much as this temple of theories was but a house built of cards, which a girl with her finger had toppled over, and left him in doubt than ever as to which was the best way to solve the intricate problem of the rights of labor.

CHAPTER XII.
PAINTING BY THE WAYSIDE.

THEY WERE IT WENT RAPIDLY BY.

The merchants of the city presented Nellie Harland with a purse of five hundred dollars. George was on a fair way to recovery. Alice had secured a position in a store, where her little girl and laughing eyes bore testimony to a contented spirit that rejoices in fair day's wage for a fair day's work, and when Joe Henderson was obliged to redeem the future, and all but Frank Grey were happy.

Times were not prosperous with him. Spring succeeded winter, yet he had secured no permanent employment, while the fees he had received for desultory contributions to the journals and magazines had been so small that he was obliged to draw on his little capital till the end of his resources was unpleasantly close at hand.

Want a lodger, and he was obliged to accept the offer of the eccentric Bailey in his forcible style, when one day Frank met him in his ramshires, "is a tolerable case, but an infernally unreliable crutch."

Now necessity has no laws.

The world did not want his services, save in one way, and that the most obnoxious. He must once more become a schoolmaster, the only profession in the states which seems always to offer a chance of employment to the impecunious, who study it in nine cases out of ten, just as short a time as necessity compels them to do so.

His new field of labor—for he soon found his position—was a village a hundred miles from the city amid the rolling prairies of Illinois.

He had been told the place to interview successfully the school authorities.

blush, though the color is very becoming to your cheeks. Now, Mr. Grey, I wanted to ask a favor of you."

"Be assured it will be granted."

"I want you to try hard to love me just one little bit."

"No need to try, dear Mrs. Woodgrove; no one could be in the same house with you and not love you."

"That is very prettily spoken, Mr. Grey, so I will reward your gallantry by dismissing you to your own chamber till we meet at lunch."

The first thing Grey did when he found himself in the solitude of his room was to write a long letter to Jack Wilders, a pleasure he had denied himself during his long disappointments in Chicago, now with a clear conscience he could get the honest prospector to tell him all the news of Oregon.

Little did he think that while he was basking in the sun of prosperity, the cold clouds of trouble were hanging over the head of the girl he loved dearer than life itself.

CHAPTER XIII.
ELISE ATTEMPTS EVERYBODY.

You may be sure there was a pretty somnolence outside the pit-mouth, when Jack and Elise were brought to the surface. Elise was there, pale as ashes, but with a clear, cool, and resolute.

Mrs. Whitford and a score of other women were ready at hand with their services; for as, frequent accidents had familiarized the women folk to sights of suffering, as the clang of the ambulance bell was often heard in the land.

Elise was carried home, where she lay on a sofa propped with pillows, undergoing a cross-examination by her foster parents, while Archibald Dodd stood glowering in the background, eyeing the unfortunate girl malevolently but with the air of one who is not quite certain of the trend of events.

"Was sitting behind a man," Elise began, slowly, when a man approached, who stood close to me—why, I could almost have touched him."

"Did you recognize him?"

"No," she answered, "Dodd looked forward and asked eagerly."

"I cannot say that I recognized him."

"This man was joined by another—a tall, slouching person, who talked with me for several minutes."

Dodd asked gently:

"You heard what they said, dear child?"

"Every word."

"Yes. Their conversation divulged a plot to murder Wilders by sending him on a fool's errand down into the bottom of the mine, where one of them, hired to do it by the other, had half cut into the rungs of the lowest ladder."

"The dastardly villain!" cried the corporal, now keenly interested. "Well, what then, lass?"

"And a brave lass thou art," the corporal cried, exulting. "The whole country will be talking of thy pluck."

Then Dodd said very significantly: "Brave—and what is better than brave is wisdom. The maiden has shown a discretion beyond her years."

Though she resolved as a matter of policy to hide Dodd's share of the crime, Elise made up her mind that it would be impossible to remain under the same roof with him; so in the course of a couple of days she announced to her mother an intention of visiting the Wilders to take care of their little boy, whilst Millie was nursing her sick husband.

To her surprise but little objection was made to the proposition, and even what little there was was overruled by Dodd, who evinced the greatest desire to see Elise go.

Before she left home, however, she determined to come to an understanding with him, and the opportunity of doing so presented itself.

"Mr. Dodd, one word with you," she said, abruptly, for trouble had made Elise more self-reliant.

"With pleasure, my dear child."

"I wanted to tell you that I did recognize the man who came first to the surface. The maiden has shown a discretion beyond her years."

Though she resolved as a matter of policy to hide Dodd's share of the crime, Elise made up her mind that it would be impossible to remain under the same roof with him; so in the course of a couple of days she announced to her mother an intention of visiting the Wilders to take care of their little boy, whilst Millie was nursing her sick husband.

To her surprise but little objection was made to the proposition, and even what little there was was overruled by Dodd, who evinced the greatest desire to see Elise go.

as a candidate for Circuit Court Judge in this district, subject to the action of the Democratic party. Election November 5, 1895.

We are authorized to announce

JUDGE THOMAS F. COOK.

as a candidate for Circuit Court Judge in this district, subject to the action of the Democratic party.

We are authorized to announce

JUDGE THOS. J. MORROW.

as a candidate for Circuit Judge of the Third Judicial District, subject to the action of the Democratic Convention July 6.

By authority we announce

of Lyon county, as a candidate for Circuit Judge of the Third judicial district, subject to the action of the Democratic party.

The goldbugs of Paducah, who captured the McCracken county convention and succeeded in "turning down" Charlie Wheeler, the leader of the bimetalists, are highly elated over their unexpected triumph. The Standard has this:

"Mr. Wheeler gracefully accepts the situation, though a very much surprised and somewhat chagrined possessor of the free silver religion. To sleep and to dream and to find it all a dream sometimes makes a man sorrier than to be awakened. Col. Wheeler is in about this condition; he had supposed that McCracken county was rampant for silver, but alas it was but a dream." Shutting a man like Wheeler out of a delegation will not keep him away from the convention. "There are plenty of free silver counties that are willing and anxious to 'take care of him,' and it is dollars to doughnuts that the brainy young silver leader will be very much in evidence when the music strikes up next week.

AA letter from a gentleman in Louisville says Congressman Clardy is being discussed as a suitable man for temporary chairman of the coming convention. No better selection could be made. Dr. Clardy is a well-equipped parliamentarian, having filled many positions as a presiding officer requiring knowledge of parliamentary procedure. He represents the Democratic section of the state and, being a farmer, is close to the pulse of the people themselves. His selection would give universal satisfaction to the country Democrats. Dr. Clardy is the best man yet suggested for the position.

The Owensboro Messenger achieved a signal triumph in its fight for silver in Owensboro and Davies county. It took up the gauntlet of battle thrown down by the Louisville papers, the revenue forces, the bankers and the powerful corporations of that wealthy city and succeeded in securing a sweeping victory not only in the county but in the city district as well. This result cannot fail to greatly enhance the influence of that ably edited and outspoken advocate of sound Democracy.

The Chicago Record's Ballot on the silver question closed Monday, a total of 12,995 votes having been cast by voters of Chicago, irrespective of party. Of these 8,028 were for the free and unlimited coinage of silver at the ratio of 16 to 1 without regard to other nations, and 4,968 were against it. These figures showed a majority of nearly two to one in the great city of Chicago for the money of the constitution. There were 253 votes cast by women, 190 for and 63 against silver.

The second district is a silver stronghold. Christian, Henderson, Davies, Hancock and McLean will cast 47 of their 49 votes for silver. The other 27 votes in Union, Webster and Hopkins will at least be divided and should it come to a vote 60 of the 78 votes will be found on the right side.

The Louisville papers are deliberately misrepresenting the situation when they claim that the returns show a victory against silver. The silver men as a rule want harmony, but if the gold fanatics try to force the issue two-thirds of the delegates will be found on the side of bimetalism.

Senator Stewart, of Nevada, the silver leader of the west, was advertised to speak at Lexington last night.

Gov. Wm. Y. Atkinson, of Georgia, is believed to be hopelessly ill of appendicitis. He was inaugurated last January, and is just 40 years of age. In the event of his death the President of the Senate, Wm. H. Venable, would act as Governor until an election could be ordered.

Editor W. P. Walton of the Standard Interior Journal, was married this week to Miss Mattie Owsley, of that city. All of his brethren of the press will unite in wishing him a future as happy as the days are long.

A careful examination of the list of Louisville delegates fails to disclose the names of those distinguished goldbugs, Editors Richard W. Knott and Henry Waterson. Perhaps after all we may have harmony.

It was all right for Patterson to mount the raging stump in Kentucky to advocate the gold standard, but the Sherman organs think it is something highly improper for Senator Stewart to speak for free silver.

Congressman Hendricks and Secretary Carlisle are now in a position to confide with each other. Livingston and Kenton counties both send free silver delegations to Louisville.

McCracken county is nursing a boomlet for Henry Burnett as a dark horse candidate for governor on a gold platform.

The national convention of Republican clubs in session at Cleveland is having much trouble over the silver question.

Col. Nall, for commissioner of agriculture, has about the surest thing of any candidate with a show of opposition.

Gov. Atkinson, of Georgia, is very low from the effects of an operation for appendicitis.

The silver men are going to have harmony if they have to fight for it.

DANGER IN TOYS.

Those Sold on the Street May Convey Infection.

The reading public is by this time fairly conversant with the ordinary sources of danger from contagion to which it is exposed and it has been duly warned to avoid the indiscriminate use of hair brushes and towels and of the ear pieces of the phonograph; to touch not with unwashed hand the brass guiding-rail of the street car and to be suspicious even of the telephone transmitter.

But, according to a medical journal, the latest hazard in infection is confined to children. Many ingenious toys are now offered on the sidewalks of city streets by itinerant vendors. One of these is a tube of paper furnished with a short piece of bamboo at one end, up to which it is coiled by the action of a slight steel spring. On blowing into the bamboo the coil is unrolled and shoots out nearly a yard and the sudden extension has a comical effect, very entertaining to the youthful mind. Another form of toy is the miniature bagpipe, which is made to emit its characteristic sounds by the pressure of air from a small rubber ball which has been inflated by air blown from the mouth.

Attention is called to the possible consequences of buying these toys, which are presented to a child after being inflated by questionable breath, and perhaps wetted with the moisture of the still more ques-

Sick Headache and Neuralgia Cured by Hood's.

"Hood's Sarsaparilla has done me a great deal of good. I have been a sufferer from sick headache and neuralgia nearly all my life. The pains had become so intense that my hands would cramp for hours so that I could not use them. The doctor told my husband there was little help for me. The different medicines I tried had greatly disheartened me. Since using two bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla I have realized relief, so much so that I feel like a new person. Our little boy has been troubled with his throat but since taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, soreness and hoarseness have gone and he is better in health." Mrs. MARRIS GUYTON, Dukedom, Tennessee. tionable lips of the vender. An infected mouthpiece has been known to be the origin of grave constitutional troubles, and it seems strange that persons who would hesitate to drink out of a glass that has been used will buy these toys and take them to their children without thought of the disease by which they may have been contaminated. Among the impoverished makers and vendors, sore throats, diphtheria and contagious fevers in very early stages may be raging and children may contract fatal diseases of even a worse character than any of these by using these toys.

The Tennessee Press Association, which has been spending a week at Cumberland Island, off the Georgia coast, passed through Atlanta on its homeward trip on last Wednesday. Quite a number of editors stopped over in Atlanta at the invitation of the Cotton States and International Exposition Company, and were entertained at a barbecue at the country house of Mr. W. A. Hemphill, vice-president of the Exposition Company. They were given an electric car ride over the city, and escorted over the Exposition grounds by a committee from the Exposition Directory. The party went on to their Tennessee homes Wednesday night, much pleased with the sights of the building of the great Fair.

The current July number of Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly presents an art-display that is unprecedented even in the history of this great periodical of the people. It contains no less than one hundred and twenty illustrations, many of them full-page engravings, in the best styles of modern pictorial art; including the work of such well-known illustrators and painters as Carl J. Becker, Valentin Gribayedoff, Joseph Pennell, Hubert Herkner, Cecil Lawson, G. F. Fretto, Makowsky, L. E. Fournier, Lepere, Enrico, Serr, Henry Dawson, J. Becker, G. A. Davis, Pruetz Shure, A. R. Shute, F. Adams, Walter Dunk, and others. These pictures are for the most part illustrative of the literary features of the number, amongst which figure: "The Russian Church in America," by V. Gribayedoff; "An Artist in London Town," by Carl J. Becker; "By the Tideless Sea" (A Memory of Shelley), by Leslie Walsh; "Duncan Fisherfolk," by Marler Scott; "Down Cape Cod," by S. H. Ferris; "Kangaroos and Kangaroo-Hunting," by Arthur Inkersley; "A Chinese Banquet," by John Paul Bocock; "Rhine Sketches," by Joseph Pennell; "H. H. Richardson, Architect," by Horace Townsend; and "Roman Mosaics," by Theo Tracy.

The first newspaper was published in England in 1688.

Good Health

And a good appetite go hand in hand. With the loss of appetite, the system cannot long sustain itself. Thus the fortifications of good health are broken down and the system is liable to attacks of disease. It is in such cases that the medical powers of Hood's Sarsaparilla are clearly shown. Thousands who have taken Hood's Sarsaparilla testify to its great merits as a purifier of the blood, its power to restore and sharpen the appetite and promote a healthy action of the digestive organs. Thus it is, not what we say but what Hood's Sarsaparilla does that tells the story and constitutes the strongest recommendation that can be urged for any medicine. Why not take Hood's Sarsaparilla now.

Better AND Cheaper.

THE ROYAL BAKING POWDER is more economical than other brands because of its greater leavening strength, as shown by both the U. S. and Canadian Government Reports.

The other baking powders contain from 20 to 80 per cent. less leavening gas than the ROYAL. So the ROYAL, even should it cost more than the others, would be much the cheaper.

In addition to this the superior flavor, sweetness, wholesomeness and delicacy of the food raised by ROYAL BAKING POWDER would make any difference in cost insignificant.

Highest of all in leavening strength.—

During the "heated term"—and it has been super-heated so far this summer—in a home on the rolling deep" has many attractions; but for the average boy the sea possesses a fascination at all times, and boys who are so fortunate as to have the opportunity to gratify their ambition "to go to sea" are usually the envied of their associates. A bright and charmingly illustrated article in Demorest's Magazine for July, "The Making of a Sailor," tells about the life aboard the school-ship St. Mary's, where boys are trained to become thorough and expert sailors, and where the training is as judiciously mingled that there is no danger of Jack becoming a bad boy. In the same number is a paper on "Contented Philistines," containing some quaint facts and embellished with illustrations of old landmarks which are of special interest. Taken altogether this is a charming number of this always popular family magazine, which is published for $2 a year. Office of publication, 16 East 14th St., New York.

THE CUBAN PATRIOTS.

A Stirring Engagement in Which the Cuban Avenue the Outrages Committed Upon Non-Combatants.

JACKSONVILLE, FLA., June 18.—A special to the Florida Citizen from Gainesville says: F. R. Anderoff, of this city, an old friend of Maj. Winn, of the Sixth Cuban Volunteers, has received another letter direct from the seat of the Cuban rebellion. The letter is as follows:

"AMERICA, PROVINCE OF CAMAGUEY, CUBA, VIA TAMPA, June 14.—Our troops to-day surprised a battalion of Spanish soldiers and almost annihilated them. It seems that their Major, hearing that a wounded Cuban officer was being nursed at this place, decided to capture him. The Spanish Major, taking his command, reached the village this morning just before day-break. After searching all the houses and not finding the wounded Cuban officer, he called some citizens before him and demanded on pain of torture that they disclose his hiding place. All denied any knowledge of the Cuban officer. The Spanish officer thereupon put all the citizens to torture. Meanwhile the Cuban had escaped and made all possible speed to us, reporting to Col. Rodriguez, who was in command. We were immediately ordered forward on double quick time. When we reached the village the scene beggared description. The Spaniards had fired the houses, and were torturing and killing on every side. Women did not escape. Our men were wild with rage. After firing one volley, they became so ferocious that they charged, and were soon engaged in a hand to hand encounter. No quarrel was given, and those of the Spaniards who were unhurt and had the strength, fled in dismay. Dead and dying were lying in heaps about the place. This was the most desperate battle I have ever been engaged in. Our loss is 163 out of a force of 500, while the Spanish loss is 472 by actual count, including officers. We captured their complete outfit and arms. This battle will delay us in reaching Gomez, but we hope to join him to-morrow.

Judge Watkins' Announcement.

Judge Thos. J. Watkins, of Lyon county, is formally announced to-day as a candidate for Circuit Judge, subject to the action of the Democratic Convention July 10. Judge Watkins is a high standing as a lawyer and a gentleman are conceded wherever he is known. He is one of the best and ablest lawyers in the district and would make an admirable judge. The Edgelyville Tale says of him:

"We believe that Lyon county presents a candidate in the person of Judge T. J. Watkins. The man not only well equipped for that important position, but one who would lead the party to victory in November with an overwhelming majority, and then would exactly fit the shoes that were made empty by the promotion of Judge Grace to the Appellate bench."

Almost a Fatal Accident.

A very painful accident, that came near resulting in fatal injuries to Mrs. B. B. Nance, occurred at her home near Pee Dee last Tuesday. A skillet of grease left by a colored woman on a hot stove had taken fire, when the woman seized hold of it and in carrying it out, ran against Mrs. Nance and her young daughter. As a result the grease was thrown over all three of them. Mr. Nance, hearing their cries, came to their rescue, but not until his wife had been very seriously burned. Much of the skin and flesh was burned from her body. Her shoulders were almost burned to a crisp, and her hair and eye-brows were badly singed. Her daughter was quite severely injured by the accident, as was also the negro woman.

More Time for Starr.

The city council held a meeting Monday night after considering a report from Jesse W. Starr, who is in Boston and trying to perfect his arrangements to go ahead with the waterworks contract, the board again extended his time until July 2, at which time he must have his plans perfected or lose his franchise. The original contract called for the completion of the works by July 15, 1895.

The General Association.

The General Association of Kentucky Baptists closed a three days meeting at Paducah Monday night. About 100 delegates from the Associations were present. Dr. J. S. Coleman was re-elected moderator for the 16th time. The various reports showed that the church had been fairly prosperous. Many subjects of interest to the denomination were discussed. The next annual meeting will be held at Bowling Green.

A Farmer Tells.

Police Court News.

On Wednesday Judge Hanbury disposed of the following business: Steve Blair, Edgar Major and Tom Reid, all colored, breach of peace, fined $5 and costs each. The case of Frank K. Weaver, colored, charged with throwing rocks into a train, and Tom Clark, disorderly, will be heard this morning.

HARDIN LEADS.

From First Page.

On the money issue only 238 votes are instructed against silver, about 25 per cent of the vote. About 135 are instructed for silver, in counties representing the extreme silver sentiment like Logan, Daviess and Crittenden. In a big majority of the counties not instructed, the delegations are like those from Christian, practically solid for silver. If the goldbugs make any attempt to have the currency plank of the Republican platform, or anything like it, inserted in the resolutions, there will be some very lively times ahead. The fact that the Louisville delegation has already elected Jno. M. Atherton as its member on the resolutions committee, is fair warning that there is a desire for harmony in the gold faction.

HARDIN'S ROY VIEWS.

The Post quotes Gen. Hardin as saying of his views:

"To his friends Gen. Hardin expressed himself so confidently that he will win the gubernatorial nomination at the State convention. He expected to lead in the instructed votes, but says the instructed vote is not a fair expression of his strength. He expects by far the larger part of the uninstructed vote."

MR. CLAY'S CONFIDENCE.

To a reporter Mr. Clay said that according to the reports of correspondents, he had lost some delegations which he supposed would be for him, but the reports more than offset these losses by gains elsewhere, which he had not expected. In several cases, too, he thought Mr. Hardin estimate in uninstructed delegates was "in excess of what would be developed in the convention."

It was evident that Mr. Clay looked for substantial support from some of the uninstructed counties. Counties like Mason, Shelby and McCracken were in point.

On the whole Mr. Clay seemed to be well satisfied with his prospects. He had not received any private information as to the financial coloring over the State.

PROF. DIETRICH.

The School Board Passes Resolutions.

At a meeting of the School Board, held on the 14th of June, 1895, the following resolutions were adopted, unanimously:

Resolved, That the Hopkinsville School Board, in accepting the resignation of Prof. Charles H. Dietrich as Superintendent of the Hopkinsville Public School, desire to say in recognition of his merits, that it is with unbounded regret that we learn of his determination to sever his connection with our schools. This Board recognizes in him a man of great ability, executive talent and tact, learning and integrity. His high sense of duty, his impartiality and strict adherence to duty in all of his official and personal relations with this Board and our school, whether popular or unpopular, have received and should receive, the applause of all just citizens of our community. We commend him wherever he may go as a scholar and a gentleman. We are not unmindful of our obligations to him, as members of society. For fifteen years he has had, in a great measure, the control and direction, not to say the future weal or woe, of our children in his charge. No man can estimate the good he has done, the blessing he has been to this community. Let the thousands of children who have gone in and out of these schools, the hundreds of young men and women whose intelligence and cultivation are so largely due to him, show forth his praise to an observant and intelligent public. We extend to him our gratitude for his devotion to our schools, his zeal and success in the cause of education, and the elevating influence which, through his efforts, have been brought to bear upon the children of this city.

May success attend him.

A Bran Famine.

There is not a bushel of bran for sale in Hopkinsville at any price. For some weeks the mills have been shut down for repairs, and the little stocks they had on hand were soon exhausted. The price in May was 16¢ cents per bushel, but all that has been sold lately brought 20 cents. None is to be had except a few sacks brought in occasionally by the country mills. None of the produce dealers here thought it worth while to order from supply centers in carload lots. During this week the millers expect to resume business and to be able to fill orders.
